Safeguarding: online & beyond

Dear delegates,

Welcome to SafeConf 2018! This is our first safeguarding conference on this scale (hopefully of many), so we are delighted to see so many from the LGfL and TRUSTnet community on what looks set to be a highly informative day of quality CPD, best-practice sharing and valuable networking.

We are grateful to the outstanding speakers who are joining us today, each an expert in their field who could easily fill a day's learning by themselves. We know the challenges of getting a day's cover, so hope you agree we have an agenda that packs a serious punch.

Most of you have a safeguarding roles as DSL or OS lead in your school, but it is a sign of the times that we are welcoming a range of others too, as schools recognize that a) online safety is safeguarding, and b) safeguarding is for all!, not just for the DSL. This is not only a reflection of the ever-increasing importance placed on safeguarding in education, but of a societal online worry list which doesn't seem to end.

Some of the topics today may be harrowing, but remember to stay positive. With people like today's speakers in the background, and so many expert professionals like you working hard at the coalface to keep children safe, the future remains bright.

So make the most of the day – the networking, the learning and the lunch. This conference is part of a broad range of safeguarding support and centre of excellence that has the full backing and commitment of the LGfL TRUSTnet team. We are here to support you, so let us know how we are doing, how we can improve, and what you need. And stay in touch!

See you soon (e.g. at the Annual LGfL TRUSTnet Services or Curriculum Conference, both at the Mermaid Centre, Blackfriars, on 30 April – book at conference.lgfl.net)!

Safeguarding: online & beyond

Harriet Lester, Internet Watch Foundation

Harriet began her career at the IWF as an internet content analyst, removing websites containing child sexual abuse images. She was then Technical Research Assistant, working on ground breaking research including the IWF's research into Self-Generated Content, and is now technical projects officer. Harriet has worked on projects including the build of 13 IWF Reporting Portals in UK Overseas Territories, the development of the IWF Image Hash List, which protects victims of child sexual abuse from re-victimisation, and integration of the Home Office's Child Abuse Image Database.

Abbie Gillgan, NSPCC

Abbie works for the Child Safety Online team at the NSPCC. She is the NSPCC's policy lead for online pornography, and was involved in the organisation's lobbying in favour of the Digital Economy Act, which introduces a requirement for pornography sites to age verify their users.

Abbie is also Project Manager for Net Aware, a joint O2 and NSPCC resource for parents and professionals, providing information and advice on the top sites, apps and games that children use.

Murray Perkins, BBFC

Murray is the principal adviser on the Digital Economy Act, under which age verification of online pornography will be introduced, at the new regulator: the British Board for Film Classification (BBFC). He is responsible for managing the BBFC's ongoing responsibilities under the Act. Murray joined the BBFC as a Film and Video Examiner in May 2000. In 2005 he became a Compliance Manager (the role previously titled Senior Examiner). Prior to coming to the UK, Murray worked for the New Zealand Office of Film and Literature Classification.

Mubina Asaria, Ealing Council & Greenford High School

Mubina is head of Online Safety & Prevent at Greenford High and seconded to Ealing Council as Prevent Schools Advisor. She pioneered the award-winning whole-school Cybermentors programme to protect pupils from cyberbullying and online risk. She has published an academic journal and completed a Masters at Kings College on the opportunities and risks of technology, and recently developed the Ealing Prevent Toolkit to support schools in implementing Prevent. Mubina is on the LGfL Safeguarding Board and Ealing Safeguarding Children's Board Education subcommittee.

Sean Arbuthnot, SMA Prevent Training

Sean is a highly regarded Prevent duty specialist who delivers bespoke training and presentations to educational settings nationwide. A former police detective, he was responsible for the strategic and practical implementation of Prevent, personally supporting vulnerable individuals at risk of various types of extremism, including far-right and Islamist-inspired. As a local Prevent co-ordinator he retains an up-to-date knowledge of this complex field as he provides strategic management and support for local Prevent activity, community engagement and youth outreach.

Jenny Fox, PSHE Association

Jenny has been teaching and leading PSHE departments in London secondary schools since 2009.

Now a subject specialist with the PSHE Association, Jenny has been co-writing the Planning Toolkit for key stages 3 and 4, delivering training to PSHE leads and working with organisations to develop PSHE education resources, including the Home Office, National Counter Terrorism Police, the NSPCC and Google.

Charlotte Aynsley, E-safety Training and Consultancy

Charlotte led Becta's internet-safety advice and support, and worked on the original Byron review and its implementation via UKCCIS. In 2010 she became Director of Practice at Beatbullying, responsible for the Cybermentors programme. Seconded to NCA CEOP to review the Thinkuknow programme, since 2013 she has run E-safety Training and Consultancy, working on high-profile initiatives with the NSPCC, Disney and ParentZone. In 2016 she worked with UKCCIS and NCA CEOP to author national sexting advice for schools and regularly trains and supports professionals to plan their response to sexting.

Prof. Maura Conway, School of Law & Govt, Dublin City University

Maura is a Professor in International Security and Coordinator of VOX-Pol, a EU-funded project on violent online political extremism (voxpoleu). Her principal research interests are in the area of terrorism and the Internet, including academic and media discourses on cyberterrorism, the functioning and effectiveness of violent political extremist online content, and violent online radicalisation. She has published over 40 articles and chapters in key academic publications and presented her findings before the United Nations in New York and the European Commission.

Safeguarding: online & beyond

Annie Mullins OBE

We are grateful to Annie for joining us as a late addition to the advertised agenda. She has a unique background, bringing her early social work experience and skills to bear in a career that has included launching the Vodafone Digital Parenting magazine and website, transforming child protection at ASK.fm by joining as Director for Trust & Safety, chairing the Home Office Social Networking Group, and working on key EU committees and working parties. She is an expert advisor to the BBFC Children's Expert Council and a UKCCIS Executive Board member.

Carolyn Bunting, Internet Matters

Carolyn has been leading Internet Matters since its launch in May 2014. Internet Matters is an independent, not-for-profit organisation dedicated to making the Internet a safer place for parents and their children.

In her role at IM, Carolyn is a member of the UKCCIS Executive Board and HRH Duke of Cambridge Taskforce for the prevention of cyberbullying.

Marie Smith, CEOP Command, NCA

Marie is Head of Education at CEOP where she has been developing and delivering the Thinkuknow programme over the past seven years.

Marie manages the Education team and the production of award-winning educational resources. Marie regularly delivers CEOP's Training courses to audiences of professionals working with children across the country and also chairs the UK Council for Child Internet Safety (UKCCIS) Education Working group.

Also speaking today (and expected to be highlights of the day, so this is certainly not a footnote):

- ☐ David from the National Counter Terrorism Security Office, whose bio will not be made public for security reasons.
- ☐ Megan, who will be telling us some of her story when she speaks to the conference.

And your MC for the day is Online Safety & Safeguarding Manager at LGfL Mark Bentley (we all hear enough about and from him at other times so no need for him to feature here!).
